

Pharmacy & Social Prescribing:

A POWERFUL PARTNERSHIP

Pharmacies are trusted, community-based healthcare hubs accessible to millions and perfectly positioned to deliver social prescribing. By connecting individuals to non-medical support like arts, social groups, financial advice, and nature-based activities pharmacists can help address the root causes of ill health and improve wellbeing.

The Global Social Prescribing Alliance (GSPA) is working with leaders across health, care, and community sectors to make this vision a reality.

Gareth Presch, CEO, Global Social Prescribing Alliance:

“Pharmacists are trusted, accessible health professionals who play a vital role in prevention and early intervention. By integrating social prescribing into pharmacy practice, we unlock new opportunities to improve community health, reduce pressure on healthcare systems, and empower individuals to lead healthier, more connected lives.”

Arun Nadarasa, Chief Executive Officer (UK) - ISPPA:

“Community pharmacies are at the heart of our health ecosystem. Embedding social prescribing into their day-to-day practice creates a bridge between clinical care and the social determinants of health. This is a game-changer for delivering equitable, person-centred support across the UK.”
